2012 descargar.Shared Care (Social Care) In return for providing a service to a service user, social care providers are able to receive payment for the service provided. The amount of money they receive is known as payment for an element of care. The shared care system in the UK is run under the auspices of the NHS. Under this system social care (and health) professionals share a national payment scheme for delivering care to people who are part of the NHS. It is organised in two ways: Each social care provider pays a £250 per patient unit fee to the NHS. They then receive a commissioning payment from the NHS for each patient, (i.e. £500 for a patient). NHS and social care professionals are funded by the NHS using a common funding stream. In return for this payment, social care professionals provide services for patients who are part of the NHS in places like hospitals, clinics, and community settings. As of 2009/2010 the Shared Care funding is £10.2 billion, this has doubled in the last 3 years, the funding is allocated through two schemes: Patient Safety and Quality Social Care & Health Social Care & Health finances a range of services for people across the country, including: casework care management community support (rehabilitation) rehabilitation assistance in finding housing health and social care health and social care The social care division of the NHS is now responsible for commissioning services to meet the changing needs of the public.

This commissioning process involves the taking of bids from providers for providing care.

Health and social care professionals each provide their own services to people who are not part of the NHS and therefore do not receive NHS funding. Breadcrumb THE WHITE HOUSE Office of the Press Secretary FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE August 19, 2001
